

OUGHT TO BE PROUD OF IT.

Our Congress the Most Interesting Body of Men in the World.

"The congress of the United States is the most interesting body of men in the world. It comes nearer to being a representative body than any other that ever existed. It is the microcosm of the republic, presenting in concentration all the extraordinary peculiarities of the nation whose work it is selected to perform. Its average of ability is higher than that of any other parliamentary body on earth. Each of its members represents a larger constituency than is represented by any single member of any European parliament, and with very few exceptions, each member is a good representative of the constituency for which he stands. Those who sneer at congress and at congressmen sneer at the voters who selected them. Luckily that sort of thing is going out of fashion. People are beginning to appreciate congress for what it really is, and it is getting better all the time.

"There are very few members either of the house or of the senate who are not of native birth. To be exact, there are just sixteen representatives and six senators who were not born in the United States. In the Fifty-sixth congress, curiously enough, one of the members is Henderson, the speaker, who is a Scotchman. But he is as genuine an American as there is in the land. Considering the proportion of foreign to native born in the United States, the percentage is insignificant, especially when it is remembered that the average member of congress is one who has been given to moving about the world and shifting his environment. Out of 352 members of the present house only 217 represent the states in which they were born, and of this number only a few still live in the congressional district where they first saw light. The average congressman is a hustler. He has been ambitious or else he would never have found his present place. That he has been successful in some measure goes without saying, and the fact that so many of them have broken away from their early surroundings, and have gained new successes in new fields, simply goes to show something of the energy and force that has made the American congress what it is."—L. A. Coolidge, in Alms.

PENNSYLVANIA SENATORSHIP.

Representative Acheson Thinks Anti-Quay Man Will Win.

Washington, Dec. 12.—Representative Acheson of Philadelphia, says that both sides in the senatorial contest in his state over the election of a successor to Senator Quay are confident of victory.

"Senator Quay, I believe, claims that he has 156 votes assured," said Mr. Acheson, "but the anti-Quayites are confident that when a vote of the legislature is taken he will fall far below that number, in fact, below 125, the number necessary to secure the senatorship. I think that Mr. Quay is a few votes short in both the state house and senate. I think an anti-Quay man will succeed Mr. Quay, but just who will be selected remains to be seen. Any number of available candidates have been mentioned. They include Representative John Dalzell of Pittsburgh, Postmaster General Smith, P. A. B. Widener, the traction magnate, John Wannamaker, State Senator Chris L. Magee and many others. Any one of these men would fill the place with distinction and honor to the Keystone state.

"Senator Quay, during the recent election, had the contest of his life on his hands. There was just one circumstance which saved him from utter defeat. That was the fact that this year was a presidential year. Had it been an off year Mr. Quay would surely have met with decisive defeat at the polls. Take the county of Westmoreland, for instance. The presidential ticket carried that ticket by 5,000 majority, while Quay carried it only by 200. In Mercer county also Mr. McKinley had a majority of 1,800, while there was only a majority of 52 for Quay. It was, therefore, the McKinley tidal wave that swept Quay through on its crest. The results clearly show that. When the state legislature meets in January a ballot will be taken for the senatorship. I do not think that Mr. Quay will muster the number necessary to a choice. In fact, I am confident that an anti-Quayite or an 'insurgent,' as they call us will get the office."
